Overview

Celebrating the International Day of Peace in Montreal

In 1981, the United Nations declared September 21st to be the International Day of Peace (IDP). This day has become an occasion to recognize and encourage the development of initiatives intended to create more peace and harmony within the world's societies.

The Peace Grantmakers Network, which regroups a variety of philanthropic foundations, institutions and corporations, has made it its mission to support peace initiatives in the fields of peaceful conflict resolution, diversity, inclusion and prevention of violence. As such, it is only natural that the Network would make IDP an important anchor in its peace-related activities, as it endeavours to put the spotlight on those who work to make peace an every day reality in our communities.

For a third consecutive year, a great number of activities – running from mid-September to mid-October – will take place in the context of IDP, encouraging Montrealers and Quebecers to reflect on the importance of peace in their lives and to commit themselves to putting “Peace in Action”.

Our Theme for 2017: “My Commitment to Peace”

Each and every one of us has an important role to play in maintaining peace and fostering harmonious relations. You need only think of the small gestures you make every day to realize it is possible to make a difference. All it takes is saying “hello” to your neighbour who just came to this country, standing up for someone being bullied in the schoolyard, defusing a colleague’s hurtful words, or demonstrating respect to your co-worker’s religious affiliation. For this year’s International Day of Peace, we encourage you to ask yourself these questions: What do you do for peace in your daily life? How do you help to ensure that your world is more inclusive, respectful, non-violent, and harmonious? Thème des Nations unies en 2017 : « Ensemble pour la paix : Respect, dignité et sécurité pour tous »

United Nations Theme for 2017: “Together for Peace: Respect, Safety and Dignity for All”

This year, the United Nations is using the International Day of Peace as an opportunity to build awareness on the realities of refugees and migrants. In this period of great instability and disruptions, the United Nations wants to highlight the commitment and mobilization of individuals who, from all around the planet, welcome children, women and men forced to leave their countries because of economic insecurity, ethnic conflicts, civil war or natural disasters. The choice of this theme was inspired by the global TOGETHER campaign, which promotes respect, safety and dignity for the world’s many migrants and refugees. This 21st of September will be the occasion to discuss the concerns, challenges, and benefits of migration, while remembering first and foremost that we are all human and we must all be united.

Message from the Mayor

The International Day of Peace is a perfect time to reiterate the emphasis we all place on inclusiveness and respect.

In a world in of Living Together across borders, dialogue and openness to others are now, more than ever before, guarantees of social harmony.

Solidarity is always on display here in Montréal and I am very proud our fellow citizens are so deeply committed to peace.

Incidentally, for its 375th birthday year, which also happens to be the 10th anniversary of the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, Montréal has introduced a symbol in the city's coat of arms and flag that stands for the historic contributions of Indigenous Peoples and serves as a token of reconciliation.

I would like to extend my thanks to members of the Peace Grantmakers Network and to all organizations committed to forging lasting peace. Your good work supports citizens' initiatives and makes communities around the planet aware of the necessity for dialogue and reconciliation.

Have a wonderful International Day of Peace!

Message from Jim Beis

This year we will look at the worldwide push toward solidarity on a local scale, under the heading My Commitment to Peace.

On this day of September 21st, 2017, the Peace Grantmakers Network will be focusing on citizen efforts as a tool for promoting peace. This international event is also highlighting the need for openness and harmony.

Celebrating this International Day of Peace is an opportunity to highlight the work of pioneers in peace dedicated on a daily basis to maintain a healthy and welcoming society.

Our community attaches great importance to solidarity. This is one reason Montréal adopted the Montréal Charter of Rights and Responsibilities, which reasserts our collective commitment to keep on making our metropolis an even better place to live!

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all partners of the Peace Grantmakers Network and I invite our fellow citizens to become part of this broad-based effort to build a more inclusive world one brick at time.

Message from the Peace Grantmakers Network

Sadly, it is becoming increasingly difficult to say that we live in a world of peace. Simply reading these words likely conjures up in your mind some of the challenges and difficulties that our world is living through.

Fortunately, though, there is a spot on the calendar recognized by all 193 member states of the United Nations as a day for reflecting on and acting for peace: September 21st. The International Day of Peace can be a rallying cry for all that is right with the world. It can be a day to celebrate diversity, to push for inclusion, to reject violence, to strive for peaceful conflict resolution, and to commit to generating a harmonious society. And that is what we are doing in Montreal, a city that is one of the great examples of peace, harmony and vivre ensemble on our planet. With diverse communities living productively and harmoniously on one island and its surroundings, Montreal is a beacon of peace for our world.

But this peace doesn't happen by itself. It must be engrained in the values that we share and we celebrate, it must be developed by the everyday actions of its citizens, and it must be maintained by the organizations and institutions that are at the heart of its functioning. The International Day of Peace Montreal 2017 shines a spotlight on these values, these actions, and these institutions, through the two dozen or so activities that are gathered under the banner of IDP Montreal which take place over a one-month period on and around September 21st.

This year, we are asking the question: "What is your commitment to peace?" As coordinators of IDP Montreal, the Peace Grantmakers Network and its 18 members from the realms of philanthropy and business are proud to show their commitment to peace through the projects they launch, develop and coordinate, with violence prevention and the celebration of diversity as their main focus. Whether you join our Network – which is firmly grounded in collaboration – to pursue your commitment to peace, or whether you have plans for yourself, your family, your organization or your community, we welcome you as part of the movement to celebrate, promote and support this city of Peace in Action!

Yours in peace,
